

CATHRINE MACORT
EXECUTIVE ASSISTANT
PROVINCETOWN CENTER FOR COASTAL STUDIES

Cathrine was born just outside Liverpool, England and was raised in Central Scotland. After completing a Masters in Archaeological Science she was employed by Maritime Explorations Inc., of Provincetown, first as an exhibit interpreter at the Whydah Museum and later as project archaeologist. While excavating wreck sites in Wellfleet, Venezuela and Madagascar, Cathrine met and worked with Chris Macort, a Cape Cod diver and historian. They married in Scotland in 2000 and now live in South Orleans with their dog, Wallace.

Since moving on from the exciting but financially unstable world of shipwreck research, Cathrine has worked for the Cape Cod Maritime Museum and the Arts Foundation of Cape Cod. Through these small non-profit organizations she learned the immense value of collaboration with other organizations and businesses in the community.

In May 2010 Cathrine joined the Provincetown Center for Coastal Studies as Executive Assistant to President and CEO Rich Delaney. In addition to managing State and Federal contracts for the scientific staff, she coordinates a variety of fund- and friend-raising events. She has also been known to do a little work for the geology department when the opportunity arises.

Cathrine travels to the Catskills with Chris and Wallace whenever time allows, and is happiest when hiking through the woods during blackberry season. She still enjoys travelling, and heads back to Scotland to see her family every year. Cathrine credits CLI with teaching her more about the Cape in 40 hours than she could hope to pick up in a lifetime.
